“Billy” Piel the Master Marketer

by David Larson

History often becomes distorted when the view one is taking is narrow and used to prove the present reality. The Journal apologizes if too often a picture is painted that idealizes the past as if to say there is something about the present that is degenerate. Yet, these studies of history can often provide a way to understand what it is that we might want to become.

One of the best-known individuals in Belvidere's past was a grocer who grew his business in size more so than his contemporaries. He became a household name in the community by becoming an active member of the community. William “Billy” Piel prospered through his success with Piel's Grocery Store on South State St. As the largest grocer in the area, he could wholesale and operate in more than one location. Had he been located in a larger city like Rockford he would have been equals with the Logli, Castrogovni and Del Pra families in the grocery business. A family run business into the 1960's, the business began nearly a century before when Belvidere was changing from a county seat with a small merchant economy drawing from the agricultural community to an economy that included manufacturing.

In the picture this week we see Mr. Piel with others photographed outside of his Logan Avenue store, The Enterprise Grocery. Today the Midland States Bank parking lot is where this picture was taken on Logan. Billy is wearing a derby and vest leaning on a crate of coffee. Mr. Piel opened The Enterprise Grocery in that location, having moved his business from an earlier location, in 1894. In 1897 he sold this business at 112 Logan Avenue to C.W. Andrews of Rockford and moved his business to 514 S. State St.

the location today of La Canasta Super Mercado. In 1900 the population of Belvidere was just over 6,900.

The first surviving advertisement for a grocery store in Belvidere is in the December 30, 1851 issue of the weekly The Belvidere Standard published by Ralph Roberts. Piel was a regular advertiser with Robert's. The population of Belvidere had just crossed 1,000.

Clearly, it was cold that day before the turn of the century in Belvidere. A snow-covered barrow of Hammond Refinery Syrup from Chicago was waiting to be processed into consumer-size units. An individual to the left had a tool to open it with in his hand.

Piel was if anything a great promoter. There were very few days where he did not appear in the local newspapers. In advertisements, he announced the importation of something unique: oysters, pineapples, premium coffee and tea, Christmas trees and many items acquired from long distances through wholesalers in Chicago. He or his representative often traveled to Chicago to shopping for these specialty high-quality products. He purchased in bulk and wholesaled the excess inventory to the many small stores in the county. His pitch was, “fine groceries at low prices.” If a competing grocery was for sale or going out of business he bought it. Piel was always building. Perhaps his most memorable marketing trick was the “Big Christmas Cheese”. In early December Piel always had a 4,000 pound round block of cheese shipped in by rail. Taking out the front window to the store, it was placed on display and the window replaced. It was ceremoniously set in place by the Mayor and five additional men as if to tuen the arrival into an event. It was announced in local newspaper advertisements and during the following weeks, sales were carved from the cheese. This experience of a shrinking block of cheese created the impression of a community cheese.

In 1924 the store was one of many locations where a Mr. Harper, an evangelical economist spoke during a week-long drive to convert locals into the way. His topic at Piel's was centered on what the biggest heads of business were doing in what he termed, ‘some rapid firework for Christ.’ Numerous bake sales were held at the store for charity. Monarch canned goods company made special visits to exhibit through special displays of their canned goods creating displays like we see in the window of this picture. Canned goods but larger displays of there many products. In 1922 Russellville Rd. was being laid with gravel having been a dirt road. A project by the county which only the gravel was purchased by it. Labor came from local farmers and local businessmen who either worked or sent employees to work on the road project. Piel and other Belvidere merchants pooled resources and got the job done. They Population in belvidere at that time was 7,900.

As a leader in the local merchant community, Piel and other merchants organized the first “Dollar Day” May 13, 1915, later it became “Maxwell Street Day” and was held until the late 70's. Merchants interviewed by the newspaper said. ‘It was a whirlwind,’ A.E. Johnson proprietor of the Economy store. Grace E. Cornwell of Cornwell & Ream, ‘the morning business being especially large’. ‘My business was more than double the ordinary day.’ Robert Heller at the Logan Ave Meat Market. ‘Dollar Day went well here,’ Sidney H. Veaco, the Rexall druggist. In the successive 65 years, Dollar Day was as much a social event as a day to get a bargain.

Piel lived in a time when people noticed and to be noticed one had to be involved in the community. The assumption was not to simply be in business. We live in different times but people have not changed just the elements of the culture we live in. Facebook replaces the social experience of State St and its marketing. Deals are to be had online where sales tax is not collected. The drones are coming to deliver your packages like flying monkey around the city of OZ... duck! The population of Belvidere today is 25,000.

Letter to The Editor

Dear Neighbors,

Plote would like to add an asphalt plant, recycling plant, concrete plant, and an Industrial park to their quarry on Irene Rd. I am usually pleased to see growth in our community; however, that is not the case with Plote. This company bullied their way into Boone County, by suing Boone County over our ordinance. Former States Attorney, Jim Hursh, settled the case by entering into a settlement agreement with Plote. This process caused the quarry to open without holding the required public hearing. In other words, it allowed Plote to force their business into an area surrounded by subdivisions, without giving the neighbors a chance to object and express concerns. That agreement created a special use permit for 5 years, and then reapplication for a special use permit was required. Plote did not adhere to the conditions of the settlement agreement, they operated illegally for three years with no permit! Our former State's Attorney, Michelle Courier, caught the error when she received a letter from Plote's attorney, informing her of their intent to operate with extended hours. Michelle wrote them a letter, informing them that they had been operating without a permit, and operating with extended hours violated the settlement agreement. When Plote applied for the special use permit, a public hearing was held this time. At that hearing, the neighbors proved that Plote was non-compliant with the terms of their settlement agreement. The Boone County Board issued them a permit, but limited the duration to 15 month "to allow the board to monitor them for compliance". A month or two later, Plote "applied early" to renewal their permit, and somehow, they were given a 5 year permit. Within 60 days of getting that permit, county officials witnessed multiple days of quarrying operations taking place outside of the allowable hours. At that point, States Attorney, Michelle Courier decided to sue Plote for violating the terms of their special use permit.

While the case was being heard in court, Bob Wallberg, our former County Board Chairman, called Judge Tobin and tried to influence the case! Judge Tobin ended the call, and disclosed the matter to the attorneys involved. Judge Tobin then recused himself and the case was reassigned to Judge Nicolosi.

When Dave Zumbrum, Plote's Project Engineer, was questioned under oath, he told, Judge Nicolosi that they had "one overzealous employee" who was coming to work early to fill and weigh trucks and that the employee had been disciplined. Does that sound plausible? Judge Nicolosi found them to be "in indirect civil contempt for violating an injunctive order". Plote appealed his ruling to the Appellate Court, and the Appellate Court upheld Judge Nicolosi's ruling. As the case continued through the court system, a new State's Attorney was elected, and eventually the case was resolved with a settlement agreement.

Now Plote is attempting to annex (or pre-annex) into Belvidere and to expand. Why? Apparently, Plote wants us to trust them to follow the rules and to be responsible with an asphalt plant. I believe that "the best predictor of future behavior, is past behavior" and I do not trust them. Would you? Their hearing is scheduled with the Belvidere Planning and Zoning Commission on Tue Oct 9th at 6:00 PM (in City Hall) at 401 Whitney Blvd. Belvidere, IL. Please join me in voicing your concerns. Sincerely,

Sherry Branson

THE TV ADVERTISEMENT FOR UNFAITHFUL MARRIED PEOPLE

Americans that are so clever have discovered that marital infidelities can also be a good business; and that is why they have created a kind of computer marriage agency, but the opposite, I mean an agency for people who want to be unfaithful to their couples. The business must go well that it is announced on television and have created a multinational of the marital infidelity which wants to be installed in Spain and of course, advertise in television as a car or cologne.

At the beginning a national channel agreed but then it gave up and I am glad; thank God there is still a bit of decency. I doubt very much that this type of businesses helps to combat the unemployment; the infidelity is as old as marriage and unfortunately it has existed, exists and will exist without the help of the Internet. Perhaps Adam and Eve also had some "affaire" when they came out of the Paradise. Leaving to one side the times in which adulterers caught "in fraganti" were punished immediately (it still happens in certain Muslim countries), recently the adultery was considered a criminal offense and could be punished with imprisonment. Adultery is not a pleasant situation for any of the three parties.

For this reason the fact that someone can "join" to a club of unfaithful people, as if this was a football team, seems to me trivialize a matter that is already thorny. I find it hard to believe that someone is up in the morning and say: "Today I am going to be unfaithful to my wife/husband" and connect to the Internet to see what possibilities there are. According to the company "Cuernos On line" "they exist indeed"; in a day 70,000 potential candidates joined it.

All these news tell us very little of the moral condition of a society where the sex has been trivialized up to consider individuals as mere recipients of sexual instincts. I think Seneca said that the age of Roman women could be calculated by the number of lovers that they had. Today he could not do so, since in his times it was calculated a lover by year and with this type of company it can be reached to one a day. It is clear that the Romans were depraved where pornography is "represented" live and direct at streets, squares and theaters... maybe we are not far from this, and we know how the Roman Empire ended, demolished by the barbarian people...

Time for a Change

By Scott Reeder

Well, I don't know who is telling the truth. And neither do you.

None of us were at that party where Christine Blasey Ford says she was sexually assaulted by Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh thirty-six years ago.

So, the best we can do is weigh the testimony of the two, look for corroborating evidence and then decide. I'm pleased the FBI will look into this matter, but I'm not particularly optimistic that after 36 years they'll come up with much in the way of new evidence.

So that leaves us in a quandary.

Here's what bothers me: Those who initially chose not to believe Paula Jones, Kathleen Willey and Monica Lewinsky because of the lack of corroborating evidence, now choose to believe Christine Blasey

Ford despite a lack of corroboration. On other hand, those who believed Bill Clinton's accusers now refuse to believe Ford because, you guessed it, there is no corroboration.

It is as if partisanship always trumps truth among those who are supposed to represent us.

As I said in last column, I don't find it suspicious that someone would wait 36 years to speak out. I was sexually assaulted in 1977 and it took me 40 years to come forward last December.

And believe me if the man who attacked me was on the brink of receiving a lifetime appointment to the U.S. Supreme Court, I'd be out naming names and hollering for all the world to hear.

But just because I don't believe it's strange for someone to wait so long doesn't necessarily mean Ford is conveying accurate information.

I've dedicated the past two years to investigating cases where people may have been wrongly convicted of crimes. My podcast, Suspect Convictions, has risen to No. 2 in the world examining just such issues.

Victim testimony is sometimes wrong.

There is no way what we heard in last week's testimony would be sufficient to send someone to prison. And if I were juror hearing this as a criminal case, I would have to vote to acquit. Guilt hasn't been proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

But what's at issue isn't whether Kavanaugh will spend the rest of his life in prison. It's whether he will receive a lifetime appointment to the highest court in the land.

I'd submit that decision isn't a legal matter, it's a political one.

What do we look for in a judge: fairness, a calm temperament and a keen intellect.

Kavanaugh certainly has the intellectual firepower. If you listened to his testimony, he repeatedly reminded us of what a good student he was and how he graduated from Yale Law School.

In his opening arguments he said: "This whole two-week effort has been a calculated and orchestrated political hit, fueled with apparent pent-up anger about President Trump and the 2016 election. Fear that has been unfairly stoked about my judicial record. Revenge on behalf of the Clintons. and millions of dollars in money from outside left-wing opposition groups."

Whoever serves on the Supreme Court will have to rule on a host of issues with partisan undertones: congressional redistricting, campaign finance, separation of powers. I want those who listen to such cases, to give them an impartial ear.

Kavanaugh's remarks prove that he is not such a person.

President Donald Trump has a host of other conservative jurists he can nominate who don't have Kavanaugh's baggage. It's time to withdraw the nomination and select someone new.

Scott Reeder is a veteran statehouse journalist. He works as a freelance reporter in the Springfield area and produces the podcast Suspect Conviction

A Public Notice is an important tool in assuring an informed citizenry; a conduit of information from the government to the public. Notices are mandated by legislatures to make sure there is a public window into the activities of governments, officers of the court and others holding a public trust. Among the most common types of public notices are: hearings, government budgets, notices of contract bids, foreclosures, probate notices, adoptions, and dissolution of marriages, name changes and assumed business names. There are four key elements to a public notice:

- Independent: A public notice is published in a forum independent of the government, typically in a local newspaper.
- Archivable: A public notice is archived in a secure and publicly available format.
- Accessible: A public notice is capable of being accessed by all segments of society.
- Verifiable: The public and the source of the notice can verify the notice was published, usually by an affidavit provided by the publisher.

Enabling an informed citizenry through newspaper public notices helped America to develop participatory democracy where it counts: where money is spent, policy is made and futures charted. Public notices by government and private parties are so tightly woven into the American fabric that many citizens may take them for granted. Located in easily found sections of the newspapers, public notices reach out to interested readers, leading them to opportunities. Voices are expressed on taxation, communities are formed around planned public improvements, and assets are saved from loss to unworthy creditors - all as a result of public notices.
