Ten teams of six competed at the fair this year setting a record for entries in the class. Seen above is an example of the grandeur of this event.

Fair Week through the Eyes of Two 17 Year Olds

Fair week is officially over in Boone County. In less than a week, summer will come to an end for students in District 100 and the 2018 – 19 school year will begin. Over the past two weeks, we at the Boone County Journal have ventured about the fairgrounds to share the public's county fair experience, capturing moments and memories that are sure to last a lifetime for many. In the final fair edition of this year, we would like to shift the focus and give you a look at the Boone County fair from the point of view of the Journal, and more specifically, two seventeen year old writers.

For those who do not know, I am currently going into my senior year as a student at Belvidere North High School. I've been writing for the Journal since October 2017 and it's been quite an adventure. When our junior year ended, my best friend, Burke Cochran - who works on the high school's newspaper with me - decided to join in on the experience. In the past three months, we interviewed countless city and county officials, as well as multiple residents in attempt of understanding the inner workings of local government and abroad. Typically, you see our names underneath the headline of the paper's well beloved historical cover story articles - or, perhaps, a story highlighting the most recent city council meeting. Since late May, the two of us knew that fair week was going to be extremely busy for the Journal. The copies that are released in the first three weeks of August always revolve around the fair. While this seems to be a lot of work dedicated toward a single event, three weeks is just enough to fill the immense amount of information that needs to be covered. From pageants and grand stand events, to livestock and home econ competition, politics and vendors, there are so many stories to be found in just one short week at the fairgrounds. While Burke and I covered the pageant, livestock events and got into some political discussion, the majority of our time was spent at the Boone County Journal booth. For six hours on every day of the fair, the two of us would hand out papers and get to know some of our audience.

Even after running out to find a quick story or partaking in conversation with new people, there were still moments on the first day of the fair where we simply had nothing to do but sit at our booth. With early mornings, occasional rain and hot afternoons, there were multiple points in the day where the crowds in the exhibit hall were small and slow moving.

At one point on Tuesday afternoon, we noticed that we were extremely hungry and picked up ice cream from the Merri Milk Maids. As the two of us ate our ice cream, I began to think about the Milk Maids and other vendors that we talked to two weeks ago. I also realized that fair food was likely going to be the only type of meal that we consumed for the next five days. While we worked the booth from 10 AM to 4 PM, we usually arrived at the fairgrounds earlier in the morning and stayed later to get information for our stories. Jokingly, Burke commented that since we were going to be eating this much fair food, we should rate our personal favorites by the day and come up with our all-time favorite for the end of the week. After some further discussion, we realized that there were so many different types of food that neither of us had ever tried - or even heard of - before. Out of boredom, and curiosity, we decided to take part in this little experiment of ours. The two of us were on a mission: find the best food in the fairgrounds. We began modestly, initially, eating more common fair delicacies. This included popcorn and snow cones from one of the nearby vendors, hot dogs and hamburgers from The Granges, potatoes from Boy Scout Troop 224 and pizza from Pizza on Earth, among others. As the week went on, we grew more adventurous, tasting chimney cakes, elephant ears and a chicken pita for the very first time

Thanks to a tip from a friend, we were also given free ice from the cart that sold elephant ears.

By the end of the week, we had full stomachs and depleted wallets. While we were both in dire need of a salad, we were by no means down in spirit. After getting advice from friends and strangers alike, we discovered multiple new foods that we loved and some that we did not. In the midst of our running around, we met different people that shared their stories and gave us some insight on various forms of culinary culture. In the midst of all of this, we had fun and learned something at the same time.

On Sunday evening, we both came to the consensus that the Mexican food we had at Marvin's Tacos was our all-time favorite meal of the week. I had steak tacos while Burke opted for a chicken quesadilla. While this was undoubtedly the tastiest thing we ate all week, we would like to note that both the baked potato and chicken pita were close runner ups and deserve an honorable mention. To clarify, the two of us are, by no means, qualified to judge in the culinary arts. These were merely our personal preferences. In our six days working at the Boone County Fair, my friend and I had the pleasure of learning new things on a multitude of levels. We picked up a basic understanding of livestock showing after hours of observing and saw how the fair operated from the viewpoint of a producer rather than a consumer. We even had a fun time with our own little experiment. While all of this was extremely beneficial to the two of us, the most important thing we took from the past week was, without a doubt, witnessing the impact that this publication has on the people of Boone County. As high school students, it isn't very often that we get feedback on our work from anyone outside of our school newspaper staff. Because of this, we have not had many opportunities to interact with our audience outside of the office. The fair was the perfect chance for us to hear what our readers really think about our writing. The comments and suggestions we received from Boone County residents has made all the difference.

Unfortunately, this ordeal started to become expensive for the two of us after four days. So, we maneuvered our way through a less costly route. We received Chick-Fil-A and Culver's coupons from some of the nearby booths and purchased refillable cherry limeade cups as well.

J.B. Pritzker and Juliana Stratton meeting with John Gedney, Boone County Democrats Chairman at the Boone County Fair.

J. B. Pritzker Visits the Boone County Fair

by Burke Cochran

Candidates for the 2018 Illinois Gubernatorial Election are in election mode preparing for the vote on November 6.

The race for Governor was a focus point for the booths of both political parties at the Boone County Fair. Republican incumbent Bruce Rauner is vying against Democratic Nominee J. B. Pritzker, for the governorship. Pritzker made a brief appearance at the fair, visiting both the tents for the Boone County Democrats and the United Auto Workers.

The visit started just before 11:00 am, when Pritzker's campaign bus drove up to the front gate of the fair. Pritzker, as well as his running mate Juliana Stratton and several other campaigners, emerged from the bus and was met by John Gedney, the Boone County Democratic Chairman and moved along to the Democratic Party Booth.

Both Pritzker and Stratton spoke in the tent, touching on struggles for working families, low job creation, stagnant wages, costs of healthcare, and the rising costs of higher education. The pair also stopped by the United Auto Workers booth to voice support for organized labor, citing labor unions as an important means to combat Illinois' uncompetitive and non-improving labor market.

Reporters from the Boone County Journal met with Pritzker's Press Secretary and were given the opportunity to ask him questions after he was done speaking. Asked for elaboration on the issue of higher education costs, Pritzker said the most crucial aspect his campaign is focusing on is education. Pritzker stated, "Illinois has been defunding higher education, literally by 30%. We need to make sure that we are funding MAP grants and make sure that faculty are staying in place in our universities." Educational funding in Illinois is lower than it is in other states. Illinois ranks close to the bottom in percent of state funding for education as well as dead last for state educational funding for low income students.

The election between Pritzker and Rauner this November is expected to be a very competitive race. It is expected to also be the single most expensive race not just in Illinois, but in the entire United States. A projected $300 million is expected to be spent between the two candidates, topping the previous $195 million that was spent on the 2010 gubernatorial race in California, where one of the candidates was Meg Whitman, a former eBay executive.

A poll from WeAskAmerica (which is given an 83% accuracy rating in correctly calling elections from fivethirtyeight.com), gives Pritzker a 9 percent lead over Rauner. This poll was taken from a sample size of 600 likely voters between June 9th and June 11th.

Republican politicians were also present at the fair. Joe Sosnowski, the State Representative for Illinois' 69th District, which contains most of Boone County and sections of Winnebago, had a booth and made several appearances throughout the fair. Sosnowski's election will also takes place on November 6th as part of the Illinois General Election. Sosnowski is being challenged by Democrat Angelique Bodine. These same two candidates went head-to-head in the 2016 election.

In the 2016 election, Sosnowski took 67% of the vote, while Bodine got 32%.

This year, both candidates ran unopposed in their primaries. While there are no major polls for the State Representative Election, in this year's Republican primary there were 10,232 votes in favor of Sosnowski and 5,843 votes in the Democratic primary for Bodine.

BELVIDERE, ILLINOIS

Letter to The Editor

Dear Editor:

On August 20th at 7:00 P.M. The Belvidere City Council will be voting on a <sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> percent sales tax. This will be the second tax increase voted on in a month. It has been explained by our Mayor that the cost of running our City has increased. He has pointed to pet projects such as repaving Logan Avenue. However, he has not included a solution or funding for the flooding during heavy rainfall that residents on the South side have experienced, and complained about, among his proposed projects.

According to the Mayor, the largest reason for the proposed tax increase is mandated pension payments for Police and Fire Departments. The Council is told that the money cannot be earmarked to be spent on much needed projects, such as repair to our aging infrastructure, repair of City streets, etc. (By the way, the City paid for a study regarding the failing infrastructure, laying out a solution on how to address the flooding that many residents and tax payers are dealing with year after year). He has indicated that funds from the tax increase will simply be dumped into the general fund to be spent on whatever pet project he desires.

I feel that very little will be spent on the south side flooding problem. Most will go to unneeded projects, like concrete workout parks, roads that are less needed repair than others (i.e. Logan Avenue Project).

The Utility Tax generates about $2 million each year. The new 2 cent per gallon gas tax will generate about $200,000 each year. Those funds will be dumped in the general fund and not be earmarked for much needed repairs to our infrastructure. The department heads and Mayor set the tone for each budget. In the current year's budget the luxury item was a $90,000 salary with $40,000 benefits plan for an Assistant Fire Chief. This is an unnecessary expenditure. I'm sure the folks who have yearly flooding in their neighborhoods due to poor drainage systems and taxed sewer systems will agree. I can hardly wait to see what will be in next year's budget if a second major tax increase is granted.

Be informed. For more information, go to www. ci.belvidere.il.us and click on the City Government tab, in the dropdown menu there is contact information for your City Council member. Contact your Alderman/Alderwomen and let them know your opinion of a second tax increase. Be sure to let them know what projects they should be earmarking the funds for. You have a voice, it is time to use it.

Ward One Alderman

Clayton Stevens.

Editor:

There are two people running for State Representative in the 69th District. Angie Bodine works to improve constituents lives while Joe Sosnowski works to grab headlines, lower living standards, and put people at risk.

Sosnowski doesn't want teachers to make more money nor does he want other voters to make a more livable wage. He wants people of any age to be able to buy firearms and bump stocks any time and from whomever they want. He does not want courts to be able to confiscate firearms from potentially dangerous people.

In May, 2018 Sosnowski voted NO to SB 2892, requiring increasing teacher salaries; voted NO to SB 3256, requiring 72 hour waiting period for guns; and voted NO to HB 2354, authorizing courts to confiscate firearms from potentially dangerous individuals.

In February, 2018 Sosnowski voted NO to HB 1465, establishing an age limit for purchase of assault-style weapons; voted NO to HB 1467, prohibiting bump stocks; voted NO to SB 1657, requiring a state-level license to sell firearms.

In July, 2017 Sosnowski voted NO to SB 6, establishing a budget for fiscal year 2017-2018; and in May, 2017, voted NO to SB 81, establishing a new miniThe Boone County Journal August 17, 2018 3 mum wage.

Finally, let's not forget his headline grabbing stunts of wanting to make Chicago a separate state and wanting to legalize fireworks. Sosnowski needs to spend his time doing something productive that will directly benefit his constituents rather than looking out for himself and his party.

Angie Bodine wants to improve our lives - let's give her a chance this November.

Newspapers Remain a Strong Voice of Democracy in Illinois

By Tara McClellan McAndrew For the Illinois Press Association

Like so much in Illinois, the origins of its newspapers were tied to politics and patronage.

This land was a wild, largely unpopulated, western territory when its first newspaper sprang up - the singlesheet Illinois Herald, published in 1814 in Kaskaskia. Its proprietor landed the job of printing territorial and national business through his friend, the territorial governor, according to the July 1918 Journal of the Illinois State Historical Society.

Some early newspapers were created to support or oppose a political candidate or issue, like the anti-slavery Edwardsville Advocate. Illinois newspapers remained political for decades in the 1800s, according to the ISHS Journal.

Publications faced many challenges: bad transportation, unreliable mail delivery and a lack of subscribers. As more settlers came to Illinois in the middle 1800s and transportation improved, newspapers fared better. The advent of railroads precipitated a newspaper boom.

Technological improvements such as the telegraph helped, too. So did wood-pulp, which made paper more economical. A lot of weeklies became dailies and foreign language newspapers arose for immigrant communities.

By the Civil War, Illinois had almost 300 newspapers, according to the Illinois Newspaper Project. While the war increased the desire for news, it brought censorship. Government restricted news sent by telegram and shut down newspapers for not supporting the war. This included the Chicago Times and the Jonesboro Gazette, according to the Abraham Lincoln Classroom online and the website of the Gazette's successor, the Gazette-Democrat.

Chicago's papers were decimated in 1871 by the city's Great Fire. Within two days, all of the major dailies were in business again, according to the Illinois Newspapers Project. Others were gone forever.

Illinois' newspapers were thriving and diversifying in 1880. The state had about 1,000 newspapers, with at least one in every county. Special interest papers were increasing. In 1899, Chicago was home to a newspaper for African-Americans, the Broad-Ax. More women, such as Myra Bradwell, were in the field. She had started the successful Chicago Legal News in 1868.

In 1902, the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign began offering journalism classes, partly in response to a call for more professionalism in media. Twenty-five years later, it opened a journalism school.

Radio brought a new threat, so did the stock market crash of 1929 and the Depression. As World War II raged, newspapers cashed in old machines and other scrap metal for the war effort. Editors and publishers had to comply, once again, with military censorship, and a plea from the governor. According to the Illinois Press Association's publication from February-March 1942, the governor asked Illinois newspapers to "impress the public ... that this is a war to finish."

After the war, the IPA fought for open government. It created a committee to investigate complaints of government inhibiting the media's access to news. It's an issue that remains today.

Newspapers have undergone drastic changes since the 1950s because of technology and competition. Insiders needlessly worried that the new invention called television would be papers' death knell. But the Watergate investigation that brought down President Richard Nixon in the 1970s fueled a new generation of reporters and readers.

The end of the 1990s and the early 2000s brought the internet and cellphones, which claimed readers and advertising dollars. In response, chains bought many independent newspapers, then reduced staff and consolidated processes to decrease costs. Papers went online and charged for digital subscriptions.

Some say print newspapers are doomed; others say their readership is greater than ever because of the internet. What's the future? No one knows, but so far the industry has survived every competitor that's come along.

A Day At The Boone County Fair

By Al Henninger Aug. 2007 Dad, Mom, and us kids were off to the Boone County Fair, Dad wanted a day of relaxation without any care. We pulled into the parking lot that was full of cars. Us kids were excited to get to the Fair, but the Gate was very far. Then we saw the carts the drivers were giving people rides to the Gate, The Drivers were friendly and said we wouldn't be late. Thru the Gate we went to have some fun. Down to Kids Games we did run. Mom went to the Home Ec. Bldg. To look at the textiles and things. Dad sat at the Gazebo, wondering what the day would bring. After games it was off to the exciting Wee farm. With a multitude of Baby farm animals with all their Charm The animal menagerie and pony rides were next. Then to the Dairy, beef, sheep and swine barn complex. We stopped for an ice cream cone, this was a habit. Then we stopped at the barn to see all the rabbits. We were excited to see the Elephant, Trapeze, and lion shows, There were so many events it kept us on the go. Dad wanted to see the tractors and motors of years gone by. Why- He knew so many owners he just had to say Hi. We all wanted to see the Turkeys, ducks, and chickens, There were little chicks hatching, we were so excited we shook like the dickens. There were funny sounds of animals in the next building we could hear. Dad said they were the friendly goats with nothing to fear. The next building and tent had many large horses and beautiful tack. Mom said that must of cost a lot of money and that's a fact. As we look down the road we saw many ponies- Not quite so Big. But there were 6 ponies hitched to a fantastic looking rig. We were having so much fun we didn't realize it was afternoon. To the food road we did go, but on the way Dad bought us a balloon. There were food stands with donuts, brats, sweet corn, hot dogs, and food galore. After eating some of all, we were so full we didn't want more. The next stop was the carnival with many rides and games with winners. The rides were clean and well maintained: we then saw a sign "Amusements by Skinner's" It was time to go home, we were tired and the day was spent. On our way out Mom & Dad sat for awhile and enjoyed the Entertainment tent. There were three buildings filled with booths and lots to see and buy. Dad wondered how everything was so orderly, and well kept and Why? Mom said she liked the friendliness, and cleanliness, compared to other events, she said this seemed so strange. Dad said before we go let's stop at the information booth and ask. There we found the answer to a wonderful day. The Fair is owned and operated by the Grange.

Prison Recidivism to Cost $13 Billion in the next Five Years

Illinois News Network

A new report shows prison recidivism could cost Illinois more than $13 billion over the next five years.

The study by the Sentencing Policy Advisory Council found 43 percent of people released from Illinois prisons each year recidivate within three years and 17 percent within one year. Illinois Justice Project Deputy Director Sharone Mitchell Jr. said the report should sound alarm bells.

I think it shows that we should be talking about the recidivism crisis in the same tones that we talk about the property and pension crisis, he said.

Mitchell credited Gov. Bruce Rauner with movement on the issue, but said there's more work to be done.

We are kind of biting along the corners and moving in the right direction, but I think this report should be a call that it is time to kind of turn the ship around," he said.

How does Illinois do that? Mitchell said the answer is drastic change. In the end, we're going to have to think about having a total overhaul on how we do three things," he said. "That is who goes to prison and who doesnit."

The other two steps would be better preparing prisoners for life after release and ensuring access to housing, education and jobs.

Mitchell pointed to the Governorís Commission on Criminal Justice Reform as a positive.

We need to go further and follow his lead and continue to kind of reform the criminal justice system," he said.

The good news is that recidivism rates are lower than previously estimated in 2015. Only 11 percent of more than 71,000 convictions were of individuals with no prior arrests. The study also found that the average cost associated with one recidivism event is $151,662. That number includes law enforcement resources, costs for courts, county jails and state prisons, and the price of imposing sentences such as community supervision.
