High Water

By David Larson

Earlier this month the Journal published a photo of the State Street Bridge prior to 1929, which was rebuilt in 2000.

In this photo of Belvidere sometime in the early 20th Century, the Main Street Bridge struggles for its existence against the spring freshet of the Kishwaukee River. What was left of the Main Street Bridge after spring waters washed it out probably left local residents wondering how many more times this was going to happen. The bridge that replaced the washed-out bridge was a metal girder bridge that stood the test of time. In the 1970's the present bridge was constructed to replace the aging metal girder bridge, which most likely was kept from washing out by its sheer weight. That bridge lacked the sleek, efficient appearance of today's Main Street Bridge.

A direct route was created with the Main Street Bridge. Railroad freight easily passed to the North part of Belvidere over it. The courthouse-bound traveler could walk directly from the train, perhaps from Chicago, to appear in Boone County Court. Perhaps a lawyer was in town to argue a case and needed lodging until the case was decided. Travelers could find hotel rooms on the north side at State and Hurlbut. Being on the north side made access to the courthouse or jail easy. The Railroad crossed Main St. and stopped at the depot where Pleasant crosses Main St.. Enterprising factors there would act as delivery personnel to bring anything the north side needed. The buildings that lined North State Street could be serviced from behind, not blocking the business, wagons and automobiles on State Street while freight was loaded or unloaded. Likewise, outgoing agricultural freight could be loaded on the rail without using State Street, which was more retail focused. At that time the Marshal sheep farm at the corner of today's Fairgrounds Road and State Street today operated and produced more mutton that the local market could support. The Belvidere

City Council may have prohibited herding a flock of market-ready mutton to be shipped to the stockyards in Chicago over the State Street Bridge and down the fancy residential and retail main thoroughfare of the city. Similarly, any grain harvested for market on the north side of the river had to cross a bridge to be loaded on an outgoing train. The Main Street Bridge was that link to the Railroad Depot.

Belvidere in the 1840's was expected to grow, and plans for the North side were for a center of the town, which had a park, many churches and the county government buildings. When Belvidere became a stopping point for rail traffic in the 1850's, the city leap-frogged over the river and the rest is history. Similarly, much of the I-90 corridor that passes through Boone County has become the natural place to locate industrial sites because of ease of access to the Interstate 90 Tollway using exits and entrances at Genoa and Irene Roads rather than bridges over unpredictable rivers.

In the background, it is easy to see the First Presbyterian Church on Lincoln Avenue and Main Street. Further East off Main Street, along the banks of the Kishwaukee River, the wealthy built homes. On the southeast corner of Lincoln and Main, through the barren trees, the outline of one of the Foote family home home, built in 1911. At the time, fencing enclosed the grand house.

City Promotes Deputy Chief Woody to Chief of Police

by David Larson

At the Monday evening Belvidere City Council Committee of the Whole, Belvidere Mayor Mike Chamberlain announced his choice of Shane Woody to assume the position of Belvidere Chief of Police. The Council voted unanimously to move his appointment forward to the February 5th City Council meeting for formal, final approval. Woody's appointment is effective on March 1, 2018.

Woody presently is Deputy Chief of the Police, having served in that capacity since 2015. In an interview Deputy Chief Woody said that he, "would continue in much of the same way" as his predecessor, Chief Jan Noble. That the discipline of professionalism in his offices was of paramount importance to him and hoped for a "balance of enforcement and community participation."

Deputy Chief Woody has a degree in criminal justice from Rock Valley College and has served in the department for 20 years.

137 Pro Football Franchises Have Moved or Folded Since Packers Joined NFL

By Tom Emery

In today's NFL, franchises come through a revolving door. The Rams moved from Los Angeles to St. Louis, then back again.

The Chargers decided that being the number-two team in L.A. was better than being number-one in San Diego. Las Vegas was so enamored with the Raiders that the city spent tens of millions just to consider the possibility, and now Oakland fans are left with long-term, lame-duck status.

Meanwhile, Green Bay, in the league's smallest city (pop. 104,057), smallest TV market (70th in the nation), and second-oldest stadium (1957), stays put. The NFL's only publicly-owned team, the Packers have not only managed to hang on for 98 years, but have collected a league-high 13 titles while also producing some of the league's most iconic moments.

Since Green Bay joined the NFL in 1921, an astounding 137 pro football franchises have either moved to a different market or folded. That includes not only the NFL, but the various major pro leagues that took on the establishment, without success.

The early years of the NFL were defined by franchise instability. Ultimately, some 48 NFL franchises have folded since the league's inception, the last in 1952.

There have been sixteen franchise shifts, beginning with one in the Packers' first season, the 1921 move of the Decatur Staleys to Chicago, where they eventually became the Bears. The most recent, the Los Angeles merry-go-round, is also included. Some of those moves date to the American Football League, founded in 1960 and merged into the NFL in 1970, creating most of today's AFC.

The franchise frenzy goes beyond the NFL. There have been several incarnations of circuits called the American Football League, beginning with one that lasted only for the 1926 season. Six franchises in the first AFL came and went, not including such teams as Rock Island, a charter member of the NFL from 1920-25 which joined the upstart league, only to go down with it. The New York Yankees, named for the baseball team, survived and entered the NFL, only to fold two years later.

Another American Football League lasted for the 1936 and 1937 seasons, with seven teams folding for good. One, the Cleveland Rams, was accepted into the NFL, only to move on to Los Angeles, St. Louis, and, well, you know.

A third AFL, which operated in 1940 and 1941, featured six teams, all of which closed up shop at the end of the league's run.

However, the All-America Football Conference was established in 1946 and fared far better, lasting four seasons and ending in a merger with the NFL. That gave rise to the Cleveland Browns and San Francisco 49ers as well as the Baltimore Colts, which played in Miami in 1946, moved to Maryland, and folded after the 1950 season. The current Colts franchise was then revived in 1953, but five other AAFC teams ultimately went defunct.

A quarter-century passed before anyone else took on the NFL. Finally in 1974, the World Football League, with gaudy uniforms and big dreams, was formed and proceeded to raid NFL rosters. Fans, though, largely stayed away, and the league was rocked by comic instability. In some cities, equipment was impounded by law enforcement to pay back debts. One team actually rented an old school bus to travel to a game.

The WFL somehow lasted for a season and a half, but not before enduring a myriad of franchise shifts and rebirths. In the end, a total of eighteen teams either moved or eventually folded.

In 1983, the United States Football League, a spring alternative to the NFL, was born, and attracted respectable crowds and television ratings. Overexpansion and the dream of taking on the NFL in the fall, though, doomed the league, which lasted through 1985. A total of twenty-two teams either ceased operations, moved or merged during their existence, or ultimately folded with the league.

If that wasn't enough, wrestling guru Vince McMahon concocted the XFL, which, mercifully, lasted only for the 2001 season. The XFL gave the world Rod Smart, who wore "He Hate Me" on the back of his jersey, as well as the scramble for the ball, instead of kickoffs. Television ratings hit record lows, and the eight-team league quickly ceased operations.

All in all, 137 pro football teams have moved or closed up shop since Curly Lambeau got his Acme Packers into the NFL. And there they have stayed, while fans in dozens of cities across America have been left out in the cold – some more than once.

Packer fans, you've got it good.

Boone County vs. Plote Construction

by David Larson

Boone County has been in court since August 2014 regarding violations of the special use permit it granted Plote Construction, Inc. at 4654 Town Hall Road in 2005. Originally filed by the former Boone County States Attorney, Michelle Currier, this matter has been concluded by Boone County States Attorney, Tricia Smith. The original complaint asserted that there had been repeated violations by Plote of the special use permit. Based on an affidavit from Drew Bliss, Senior Building Inspector for Boone County, the quarry had been operating outside of allowable hours under the special use permit. Plote had taken the position that it could operate until 10 p.m. because it was doing work on a contract with the Illinois Tollway.

The Agreed Order and Settlement between the parties was filed on December 13, 2017 and averted the potential for a permanent injunction at the quarry.

In the settlement, the defendant agreed to operate within the terms of the special use permit and pay $1500 in fines. Neither party admitted liability. The agreement was favorable to the county by enforcing the original 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. operating hours, as required by the special use permit. The County Board approved the settlement at its November meeting.

Free Mammograms

Free mammograms for women without health insurance A Silver Lining Foundation is offering referrals for free mammograms to uninsured women in Winnebago, Boone and Ogle counties with the help of a $15,000 grant from the Community Foundation of Northern Illinois.

To obtain a referral for a free mammogram at Mercyhealth or UW Health-SwedishAmerican, contact ASLF at 877-924-1126.

ASLF, a Chicago-based nonprofit, played a key role in launching Senator Stadelman's Women's Wellness Fair in 2015 and has participated every year since, promoting mammograms for early detection and treatment of breast cancer.

Lakewood's Reform-Oriented Leadership

By: Ted Dabrowski - Wirepoints

Illinois News Network, ILNews.org - To see what a reform-oriented Illinois might look like under different state leadership, just look at what's happened the last few months in the small village of Lakewood, Illinois.

Since a new board was elected last year, the Village of Lakewood has abolished its TIF, reduced the village's property tax levy and even returned some tax dollars back to residents located in the terminated TIF. Village President Paul Serwatka and its reform-oriented trustees have delivered on their promises.

You probably won't hear a similar story anywhere throughout the state.

In most municipalities, property taxes and other fees continue to rise. That's the case whether it's in wealthy villages like Wilmette and or in less affluent cities like Danville.

Illinois already has the highest property taxes in the nation and those hikes will only make things worse.

And in other cities, officials are pushing for more TIFs despite the perils of letting politicians dole out taxpayer funds to property developers.

Unfortunately for Illinoisans, most municipalities in the state continue to pursue the same policies that have left Illinois with a shrinking population for four years in a row.

Serwatka's approach has been the just the opposite.

To start with, he made a commitment he'd abolish the 600-acre TIF that was established in 2015. He opposes letting local officials pick winners and losers so they can subsidize corporations at the expense of taxpayers. He's concerned about the corruption that's been found in far too many TIFs.

"In Lakewood, the TIF was an enormous amount of money for the size of our community. It was entirely too risky. All the risk was being put on the taxpayers of the village and the surrounding area."

The TIF was abolished late last year. And the households that had some of their tax dollars diverted to TIFs? Serwatka and the board recently announced they'd return the unused money back to those households.

As for property taxes, Serwatka and his board allies ran on a platform of reducing them, not increasing them. The board announced in December the tax levy for the village would drop by 10 percent.

To get there, the board didn't cut services. Instead they focused on cutting back a top-heavy bureaucratic administration. They consolidated roles and reduced duplication. No services were cut.

"We were able to create efficiencies and remove redundancies and show a real reduction in administrative costs...with zero reduction in any services. And with those reforms in place, we were able to invest more in our police presence and on our winter roads."

It goes to show you what can happen when leaders actually make their budgets work through reforms.

The Village of Lakewood might be just one small village in Illinois. But it's showing the rest of the state what sensible reform can look like in Illinois.

RVC Dental Hygiene Clinic Seeks Patients

Rock Valley College's Dental Hygiene Program is looking for patients who have not received regular routine dental hygiene treatment (cleanings) for at least three years. Patients will also receive other dental hygiene preventative services such as oral examinations, oral cancer screenings, fluoride varnish, and x-rays for a low cost.

In addition, patients who qualify to sit for a licensure exam for students may receive their initial treatment (dental exam, professional cleaning, x-rays, and fluoride varnish) at no cost.

Due to the educational nature of the program, several appointments will be necessary to complete care. Please expect multiple appointments 3 hours in length. Depending on the time of the year and the needs of the students, not all patients that call will be appointed.

Dental hygiene treatment is performed by students who are supervised by dental hygiene faculty consisting of registered dental hygienists and licensed dentists.

The dental hygiene clinic is located on the 1st floor in a brand new state-of-the-art Health Sciences Center on Main Campus, 3301 N. Mulford Rd., Rockford, IL, 61114.

For more information about the RVC Dental Hygiene Clinic or to schedule an appointment call (815) 921-3235.

Muscle guarding or stiffening happens much later, at 200 milliseconds. One study showed that rear-end collisions increases the risk of future health complaints by almost 4 times.

In conclusion, even simple car accidents without obvious injuries can cause health problems. What can be done about it? Please remember that stretched or damaged ligaments don't like to be stretched more. So traction of the neck is not going to feel good. In the upper cervical chiropractic procedure that we use, analysis of all the segments of the cervical spine, and even the ligaments of the upper neck, are an important part of appropriate treatment. The procedure we use, NUCCA (National Upper Cervical Chiropractic Association) provides a soft way of correcting the misaligned bones without stressing the neck at all. But back to my migraines! They went away after I discovered the NUCCA procedure existed. I had the upper cervical correction, and eight months later my headaches were gone, 26 years after the injury that caused them! Now I get to enjoy the satisfaction of helping other people restore their health with upper cervical chiropractic.

Ask the Doc

Philip R. Schalow, DC, DCCJP

How hurt can you be in a car accident?

My friend, Simon, had a hard forehead. He used it often in soccer games in high school in his position as the "sweep" in the middle defensive position. And that afternoon, it served him well as my distracted-while-driving sister plowed into the car in front of us. Simon was in the front seat in the era before seat belts, and his wonderful forehead obliterated the windshield. I was in the back seat and struck my head on the side of the car. Simon seemed a little dazed for a while, and had small scratches on his forehead, but otherwise had no symptoms. On the other hand, I had a headache that night, and a few years later began getting frequent migraines. But I often wonder how that trauma, which had no obvious signs other than some scratches, might have influenced the path of Simon's life. He dropped out of college, got in trouble with the law, and vanished.

Thanks to some energetic researchers, we now know that accidents can cause serious damage inside the head and neck without causing obvious signs like profuse bleeding or broken bones. The forces whipping the head and neck have the potential to disrupt ligaments, tear lose the supporting framework of the neck and head, and cause the spine to settle into a stressed and misaligned position. Little fender benders at speeds as low as 6.2 mph have a 40% chance of causing neck problems. A person is more likely to have hidden injuries when struck from behind, depending on awareness of the impact and geometry of the head support. And what is amazing about these events is that within 50-120 milliseconds - before you can even react - ligament damage has already occurred.

Illinois LLC organization fees
have dropped from $500 to $150!
Protect yourself (and maybe lower taxes)!

If you have been putting off incorporating your business, now is the time. LLCs protect your home, car, etc. from the liabilities of your business. if an accident happens, why risk it?

The annual fee is lower, too. Was $250, now $75. With the recent federal tax changes, you may also be able to lower your taxes using a corporation or an LLC.

Forming an LLC or corporation properly is not a do-it-yourself project. It's more than just filing a form with the Secretary of State. There are important tax and other consequences if it isn't done properly. And if you are already incorporated, you might save money converting to an LLC. Tax situations vary-I'd be happy to help discuss yours with you.

Don't procrastinate. As a special incentive, I will lower my fee to form and set up a simple, single-member LLC to just $600 through March 31. This is the 1993 price, when LLCs were brand new! For just $750 (including the state fees), you'll have the personal protection you need.

Act now. Protect your family and save money in the process.

--In Our Opinion--

Doing Their Homework

A number of factors have come together to make Boone County economically a good place to produce energy.

Proximity to large electrical demand (Chicago and steel mills in Gary) is a major factor. Add in relatively inexpensive land prices, and because geographically, Boone County is part of the more-valuable PJM interconnect market, rather than the MISO market, and Boone County becomes a good place to generate electricity.

These are some of the key reasons a "peaker plant" will be located Garden Prairie Road and the Interstate 90 Tollway.

Electricity can be produced in a variety of ways. A very simple example would be a waterwheel on the Kishwaukee in historic Belvidere. In the 20th Century, most electricity came from burning coal or nuclear power plants.

The 21st Century has brought us several other options, that, while perhaps not totally new, became feasible due to the advance of technology. A natural gas plant such as the peaker plant is a good example. Other possibilities are renewables, such as geothermal, wind and solar. Boone County has used some small-scale geothermal power in its mix.

Several years were spent discussing the feasibility and desirability of commercial wind power in Boone County.

Which brings us to the current time, when several companies are proposing commercial-scale solar farms in Boone County. Additionally, the county is considering a solar farm on the site of a landfill. A technology that was considered futuristic has been proven to be economically feasible.

Currently, any solar installation of more than one megawatt requires a special use permit in Boone County. The county would have to determine under what circumstances and conditions solar power could be generated. There is no "solar ordinance" or general guideline that a developer should follow.

Last week, about half the members of the Boone County Board toured a solar panel-making facility in Rockford. This field trip was to learn more about solar energy and what could be expected if solar panels start appearing at the landfill and other sites in Boone County.

We would like to give the Boone County Board credit for educating themselves on solar technology. Solar power could provide revenue to the county at the landfill and might enhance the fortunes of several private landowners. In general, we see solar power as a positive development and believe that, properly designed and regulated, could be good for Boone County as well.

Technology is changing rapidly, and it is very, very difficult to keep up. This is why we applaud the board members for taking their time to learn the facts about solar power.

Many of us recently watched the often-noisy wind power debate in Boone County. For better or for worse, wind power opponents went to great lengths to prevent wind towers from coming here. While there are advantages and disadvantages to nearly anything, Boone County officials were treated to some ridiculous and preposterous claims about wind power by some of their constituents. In the end, much of the argument amounted to "we don't want to look at wind towers" or "we want to make money."

We are not here to reopen the discussion of wind power in Boone County. But we would remind all that many of the silly claims are a matter of public record. Developers come and go. The wind project is gone, but the embarrassment, harsh words and hurt feelings remain. Boone County is a small place where reputations are important. Those who live here would do wise to pay heed to that fact.

A well-informed County Board will be able to draw intelligent conclusions about solar power and whether it is right for Boone County. We would rather they formulate those opinions based on objective facts and analysis than the claims of developers. Several issues are already rising to the fore: What happens when the equipment and/or the solar farm become obsolete? Who pays to remove the solar arrays? Who should pay to visually screen these installations in places where they might be regarded as unsightly? How much screening is enough? What can we do to protect the soil during the life of the solar farm? Clearly more questions will arise. Another important question is how the State of Illinois will, in the future, allow counties to tax solar power production or facilities.

In the end, we may disagree with the County Board's decisions. But fact-based decisions are almost always better-reasoned and easier to support than shooting from the hip or taking a developer's word for it.

It strikes us the County Board is on the right track with this issue.

Roget's Thesaurus Coward (noun): Chicken, quitter, weakling, deserter, runaway, Fraidy-cat, Scaredy-cat.

By Scott Reeder

SPRINGFIELD – Our governor, Bruce Rauner, is a coward.

How else can we describe a man who refuses to debate his opponent?

Last month, journalists in Jacksonville tried to pin the governor down on whether he would debate his Republican opponent, state Rep. Jeanne Ives.

He was asked three times and he refused to answer. It's not a way of projecting yourself as a man of resolve. He refused to answer a yes or no question.

The University of Illinois at Springfield, WMAY radio and the State Journal-Register tried to organize a GOP debate for next month, but according to the newspaper Rauner has indicated he won't go.

I emailed Rauner's campaign spokesman Justin Giorgio to find out why the governor is laying low. He did not respond to multiple emails.

Of course, Rauner doesn't likely see himself as a coward. He's probably been advised not to give his opponent an opportunity for free publicity since he is leading her in the polls.

But there is a problem with that contention. When there is no debate, the loser isn't Jeanne Ives. The losers are the voters.

They deserve to know where their candidates stand on the issues. When Rauner thumbs his nose at debating the person he is running against, he is showing contempt not just for his opponent but for the process.

Rauner has called Ives a "fringe candidate." Perhaps he thinks she is unworthy to be in the same forum with a sitting governor.

Well, I know Ives and I respect her. She has six years of service in the Illinois General Assembly under her belt. That's six more years of elected public service than Rauner had when he was running for governor four years ago. So, in that sense, she is less of a "fringe candidate" than when the governor first ran.

Yes, Ives is conservative on both social and economic issues. But so are many of the GOP's primary voters.

Perhaps the governor is talking about money. He is way ahead of her in that area. He donated $50 million to his own campaign fund as a way of intimidating any would-be opponents from running. The only GOP candidate to step forward to challenge him was Ives. She has raised about $500,000.

So, if the criteria for determining whether someone is worthy of being debated is how much money someone has raised, why have an election?

We could hold an auction instead.

Since Rauner's campaign won't say why he won't debate, I asked Ives why she thinks the governor is avoiding facing her.

"Bruce Rauner is not prepared to have a substantive policy discussion with me. There is much he has to answer for during his four years in office. He's just afraid to debate a woman on the issues."
