The post office was officially opened with a grand ceremony on October 9, 1911, 112 years ago this week. After a ceremony with speeches from the leadership of Belvidere, thousands of local residents toured the building that day. It was a sunny, crisp fall day that was punctuated by speeches that captured the imagination of the overflow crowd that attended. There had been unpleasant weather in the preceding days, and the welcomed good weather brought many on to the south side of the building to hear the speakers. The throng spilled over into Dr. Whitman's lawn on the corner and on to South State Street. Reverend Dr. W. H. Pierce's opening described the building as a symbol of symmetry, beauty, and progress in civilization. A local quartet played "Kentucky Babe."

Mayor Dr. R. W. McInnes took the podium and spoke about the opportunity the public

Buoyed by State Funding, Biomedical Research Hub Launches in Chicago

Chan Zuckerberg Biohub part of Facebook founder's philanthropy

By Andrew Adams Capitol News Illinois

With vocal support from the governor and $25 million from the state, biomedical researchers are beginning to work on studying the fundamentals of human disease at a new facility in Chicago.

The Chan Zuckerberg Biohub – named for philanthropists Priscilla Chan and her husband and Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg – is the second biomedical research center launched by the Chan Zuckerberg Initiative. The first is in San Francisco.

In addition to initial state funding, the center will receive $250 million from the Chan Zuckerberg Initiative over 10 years to fund research into inflammation, part of the body's innate response to irritation and disease.

The for-profit philanthropy organization chose the Chicago location based on the application of a team of scientists from Northwestern University, the University of Chicago and the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign. Theirs was chosen from a pool of 58 applications.

Nurses Unions Push For Mandatory Staff-To-Patient Ratios

Safe Patients Limit Act would cap the number of patients per registered nurse

By Peter Hancock Capitol News Illinois

Unions representing nurses in Illinois are pushing for legislation that would impose mandatory staff-to-patient ratios in hospitals, nursing homes and other health care facilities.

But lobby groups representing hospitals and nursing homes say they are steadfastly opposed to the legislation, arguing that a nationwide nursing shortage makes it impossible to comply with such a mandate.

The proposed Safe Patient Limits Act, by Sen. Celina Villanueva and Rep. Theresa Mah, both Chicago Democrats, was introduced in February and was the subject of a joint hearing last week in Chicago by two House committees. It's an issue that has been discussed in the General Assembly since 2019 but has thus far failed to gain the necessary traction for passage. The latest hearing came just three weeks before lawmakers return to the Capitol for their fall veto session, which begins Oct. 24.

"Short staffing isn't a mere inconvenience. It's a dire issue," said Shaba Andrich, vice president of nursing homes for the SEIU Healthcare employee union. "It's predominantly a Black and brown issue. In historically marginalized communities of Chicago, these issues are magnified. These communities that already face systemic underinvestment are further deprived of adequate nursing care

Biden Administration Responds to Calls From Pritzker, Other Leaders, for Help in Migrant Crisis

Homeland Security will expedite work authorizations among other actions

By Peter Hancock Capitol News Illinois

The Department of Homeland Security will speed up the processing of work authorizations for asylum seekers and extend Temporary Protected Status to Venezuelan migrants, actions that could help thousands of migrants who have arrived in Illinois in recent months.

Those moves were announced by the Biden administration Wednesday in response to pleas from leaders in Illinois, New York and other states for help in dealing with the ongoing migrant crisis that is taxing the resources cities like Chicago, where many migrants have been sent, sometimes without any notification.

At an Aug. 30 news conference, Gov. JB Pritzker, U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin, Chicago Mayor Brandon Johnson and state business leaders called on the administration to ease work restrictions for asylum seekers and other long-term undocumented workers. At that time, Chicago officials said the city had received more than 13,000 asylum seekers, the vast majority of whom had no official authorization to work in the United States.

Among other things, those officials requested DHS to allow states to sponsor asylum seekers had to tour the building, while, in the future, only the lobby would be open to the public, as the work of the post office would restrict them from full access. He remarked that because home delivery in the city and rural Boone County had recently begun, few in the future would have the occasion to come to the post office to pickup their mail. He noted that the size of the former post offices at the City Hall, today's fire station on South State Street, and the Union Hall prior to that, which was located possibly where the State Street Commons building is today in the 500 block of south State Street, could not accommodate the expansion of home delivery service.

McInnes philosophized in the following words from the Belvidere Daily Republican.

"Some individuals, and some communities are anxious to build monuments for future generations to admire and enjoy. This should not be our incentive at this time, for it is built for our comfort and especial use and not for posterity alone.

Let future generations work out their necessities and not mortgage the present time for their wants, be it enough for them that we build the foundations as our ancestors did for us."

His statements were followed with a solo sung by Maud Cornish.

Frank T. Moran, publisher of the Belvidere Daily Republican and also the Belvidere Postmaster, spoke about the history of the project, which began in June 1906. Construction was funded by a federal allocation of $65,000 who he attributed that success to the current Congressman, Charles Fuller. Upon the purchase of the land for $13,000, Fuller was able to get another $8,000, bringing the total to $73,000.

It cost $53,000 to build the building, and the remainder was used to paint and furnish the interior. A government agent was assigned to be present all during construction to inspect the progress of the work of G. Maffeli & Sons of Rockford beginning in September of 1909.

A delay between 1906 and 1909 occurred because of an imperfect title to the land, which took three years to resolve.

Moran told stories about comments from skeptical individuals made to him about the government expense. One said, "Yes, it is a nice building, but don't you think the cost is going to be a burden on taxpayers?" Moran's response was that the money does not come from local or state taxes, and that it is no more of a burden than if it had been built in Denver. At the time, there was no income tax in the United States. Had our Congressman not been able to capture the allocation, it would have been built someplace else.

In a second antidote, Moran told a story about a rural resident who lived 6 miles out of town who refused to put up a mailbox, demanding that the post office do it because he paid taxes. To which, Moran responded, the only time you contribute is when you buy a stamp. You pay no taxes for your service, which operates at a loss because of where you live.

In conclusion to these speakers, A. E. Loop spoke about the post office as an engine of economic development, giving the example that if the mail stopped for one week, the country would not be able to function.

for work authorizations. And while that was not one of the actions DHS announced Wednesday, Pritzker said he was happy with the actions the agency took to make it easier for those individuals to find employment.

“I’m very pleased that President Biden has listened to my concerns and those of other governors and political leaders and expanded Temporary Protected Status to migrants from Venezuela, thousands of whom have been sent to Illinois over the last year,” Pritzker said in a statement Wednesday.

“Despite traveling thousands of treacherous miles and then being used as political chess pieces by those who should have welcomed and helped them, they are eager to contribute to their new communities and get to work,” the governor added.

Pritzker was referring to actions by Republican Govs. Greg Abbott, of Texas, and Ron DeSantis, of Florida, who have been busing migrants from their states to so-called “sanctuary” cities such as Chicago and New York City.

Asylum seekers are people seeking temporary shelter and protection in the U.S. because they have suffered, or fear suffering, persecution in their home country due to factors such as race, religion, nationality, or political opinion.

To be eligible for asylum, people must be physically present in the U.S. and apply for that status, usually by filing an online application form known as an I-589, within one year of their arrival.

Federal law still requires asylum seekers to wait six months after filing their claim before they can apply for a work permit, officially known as an Employment Authorization Document, or EAD. But starting Oct. 1, DHS says it will dedicate additional staff to reducing the median processing time for those applications from 90 days to 30 days.

In addition, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services will increase the maximum validity period for EADs to five years for certain noncitizens, including those admitted as refugees or granted asylum, those who have been granted withholding of removal, and applicants for asylum.

DHS will also extend Temporary Protected Status for 18 months to Venezuelan migrants who were living in the U.S. on or before July 31. That’s a temporary immigration status for people from certain countries experiencing issues that make it difficult or unsafe to return home.

According to the humanitarian aid group World Vision International, as of August 2023, more than 7.7 million people had fled Venezuela since 2014, due largely to political unrest brought on by years of hyperinflation, political corruption and economic problems. Most of those have fled to Caribbean and other Latin American nations.

Under the socialist government of former president Hugo Chavez, the country was almost entirely reliant on oil revenue to fund government operations. But that revenue dried up when oil prices plummeted in 2014, resulting in a collapse of the Venezuelan economy and dire shortages of food, medicine, and other necessities.

Giannoulias Recommends Permanent Increase To Driving Test Age Requirement

Change spurred by COVID-19 pandemic increased testing age to 79

By Andrew Adams Capitol News Illinois

Illinois Secretary of State Alexi Giannoulias this week filed administrative rules that would increase the age at which a driver is required to pass a driving test when they renew their license, raising it from 75 to 79.

The rules – proposed by Giannoulias to the legislative Joint Committee on Administrative Rules – would keep in place a state policy that went into effect during the COVID-19 pandemic.

During the pandemic, lawmakers in Springfield temporarily modified several requirements for driver’s licenses to ease strain on the secretary of state’s office, which oversees driver services facilities. That included the age increase for required driver tests.

But that policy was scheduled to expire on Oct. 1, so Giannoulias’ office filed emergency rules to extend it beyond that date, along with identical permanent rules. That rulemaking committee’s next regular meeting is planned for Oct. 17 in Chicago, at which point it can determine whether to leave the rules in place, request changes or file an objection.

“This change would make Illinois driving standards for senior drivers more consistent compared to other states while keeping Illinois as one of the strictest states for license renewals,” Giannoulias said in a Wednesday news release.

Under the pandemic-era policy and the rules proposed by Giannoulias, all drivers aged 78 and younger must renew their licenses every four years. At age 79, drivers must complete a driving test as part of that process.

State policies for those aged 79 and older would not change under Giannoulias’ proposed rules. Drivers aged 81 to 86 must renew their license and take a vision and driving test every two years, and drivers aged 87 and older must renew their license and take those tests every year.

Illinois is the only state in the country that has a driving test requirement for people over a certain age. Illinois also requires more frequent driver’s license renewals for people over age 80, something only 23 states require.

The change will affect approximately 3 percent of Illinois’ driving population, according to the secretary of state’s office.

As part of the temporary change, the secretary of state’s office issued a report on driving safety among older drivers, which found that drivers aged 75 years and older were involved in fewer crashes – even after the temporary rule change went into effect – than those aged 16 to 69 years.

“When it comes to total crashes, individuals who are aged 75 and older consistently experienced lower crash rates compared to nearly every other age group,” according to the report.

Age-related requirements for drivers have been a longtime issue for AARP Illinois, an advocacy group that represents the interests of those over age 50.

“Age alone is not determinative of driving performance” Ryan Gruenenfelder, outreach and advocacy manager at AARP Illinois, told Capitol News Illinois.

Gruenenfelder said AARP receives complaints about age-related requirements for drivers, noting they make competent drivers feel “targeted” for their age. He said the organization will continue to work with the secretary of state’s office and advocate for using a person’s mobility or indicators of driving behavior to trigger possible driving test requirements, regardless of age.

But Gruenenfelder said AARP commends Giannoulias for his recommendation this week. The group also approves of Giannoulias’ September action to move the state’s busiest driver services facilities to an appointment-based model, as well as this week’s announcement that two new facilities targeted to senior drivers will offer walk-in services.

R1 Receives $166,360 Grant to Fund Plans To Modernize Parking In Rockford Region

Press Release

Region 1 Planning Council (R1) was awarded a $166,360 grant from the Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) to support creation of a Parking Reimagined Plan for the Rockford Region. The Parking Reimagined Plan will demonstrate how parking can be transformed over the next 5-10 years to balance the need to provide space for automobiles while also supporting equity, affordability, environmental stewardship, community design, and the economy.

The completed plan will examine the following areas:

- The current state of parking in the Rockford Region
- Parking costs
- Benefits and drawbacks of effective parking systems
- Current and future trends
- Strategies and recommendations

R1's award was part of a total $11 million administered through IDOT to support a variety of long-range transportation projects throughout Illinois. Grants awarded included a mix of federal, state, and local funds.

"Thanks to Gov. Pritzker's leadership, we are partnering with communities throughout the state to get them the tools they need to reimagine how they want transportation to work for their residents," said Illinois Transportation Secretary Omer Osman in a press release.

R1 is the Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) for the Rockford Region, which is a federally required designation for all urban areas with a population over 50,000. As the MPO, it is R1's responsibility to plan and execute all transportation-related decisions for the urbanized areas of Winnebago, Boone, and Ogle Counties.

ABOUT R1: Region 1 Planning Council (R1) is a special-purpose, regional government agency. Regional councils are public organizations comprised of local elected officials that promote collaboration among local governments, working across the jurisdictional silos of states, counties, and municipalities. A regional council depends on intergovernmental collaboration to foster economic and community growth; through planning, research, federal funding, and data.
