The Legacy of One Room Schools In Illinois

By David Larson

When the days truly begin to shorten, to a recognizable extent, parents and children begin to think of the new school year ahead. In this area of Northern Illinois, after the Boone County Fair, most often by the second week in August, many recognize that the start of the new school year is not far away. It is Brigadoon.

Back when the students shown here were walking or riding a horse to reach their country school in the late 19th Century or early 20th Century, reading, writing, and arithmetic were the primary elements of the elementary and secondary education curricula. Other areas of study were taught, but the content was limited. Professional teachers believe a liberal arts education is vital, so everyone has a broader understanding, to equip them to lead a long life with many complexities ahead. The three Rs are just a beginning.

Much about public education has changed since this photograph was staged and shot. Storybook historical fantasy is slowly being replaced by the fruits of academic understanding. The social sciences are expanding our character and addressing the problems of each generation.

Disparately Resourced Public Defenders Prepare for the End of Cash Bail in Illinois

Public defenders, while supportive of reform, anticipate major workload increases

By Hannah Meisel Capitol News Illinois

Illinois on Monday will become the first state to fully abolish cash bail through an act of the legislature — a major criminal justice overhaul spurred by the advocacy of a progressive faction of the Democratic Party that's grown increasingly powerful in recent years.

The reform goes into effect after nearly three years of brutal legislative and political fights over the SAFE-T Act, one of several massive pieces of equity-focused legislation pushed by the Illinois Legislative Black Caucus in the wake of nationwide protests in 2020 over injustices faced by Black Americans and systemic racism more broadly.

Criminal justice reform advocates have been working toward Monday's rollout for years, beginning with the premise that an arrestee's ability to post bond does not equate with the

Ahead of Cash Bail's End, State's Replacement Pretrial Justice System Takes Shape

Courts will see longer detention hearings, new parameters for jailing accused defenders

By Jerry Nowicki & Hannah Meisel
Capitol News Illinois

Beginning Monday, state courts in Illinois will be prohibited from jailing individuals who are accused — but not convicted — of crimes simply because they cannot afford to post bail while they await trial.

Monetary bond will be abolished in favor of a system that seeks to give judges authority to detain defendants accused of committing violent crimes based on their level of risk to the community or of willful flight from prosecution.

The new system will require more robust hearings when someone's freedom is on the line, while aiming to avoid disruptive pretrial incarceration if the accused person's offense was nonviolent and they are not deemed a public safety or flight risk.

After a highly contentious election cycle last year in which Republicans used the so-called Pretrial Fairness Act to attack Democrats for being "soft on crime," a series of legal challenges from state's attorneys and sheriffs delayed the law's implementation while the Illinois Supreme Court weighed its constitutionality. In a partisan 5-2 decision in July, the court's majority agreed that lawmaker-driven bail reform was constitutional, setting up a Sept. 18 statewide rollout for the law, more than nine months after the intended Jan. 1

New State Police Rules For Assault Weapons Permits Will Take Effect Oct. 1

People who owned banned weapons before new law must apply for FOID endorsement

By Peter Hancock Capitol News Illinois

Illinoisans who own weapons that can no longer be purchased or sold in the state under its new assault weapons ban will soon be able to register those weapons so they can legally keep them.

The law, officially known as the Protect Illinois Communities Act, bans the sale and possession of firearms defined as "assault weapons" as well as assault weapon attachments, .50 caliber rifles, .50 caliber cartridges and high-capacity magazines.

However, the law provides an exception for Illinoisans who already owned such items before it went into effect. Those people are required to submit an endorsement affidavit through their Firearm Owner's Identification Card account before Jan. 1, 2024.

The Illinois State Police filed emergency rules with the secretary of state on Monday to implement that portion of the assault weapons ban beginning next month.

State agencies have authority to issue emergency rules in certain circumstances. Those rules can only remain in place for up to 150 days, after which they must be replaced by permanent rules or repealed. Permanent rules are subject to a public comment period and review by the legislative Joint Committee on Administrative Rules.

ISP will begin accepting affidavits online starting Oct. 1. Affidavits must be submitted online through a FOID Card account, which can be accessed through ISP's Firearms Services Bureau

We know much more today about the arts and humanities. But the ability to read well is still the most prized skill anyone could have. To write well speaks for itself. And arithmetic is still arithmetic. Music and chorus were often favorites with many students, even in a one-room schoolhouse. Later, students received training in how to play certain musical instruments and to perform musical pieces as educational opportunities expanded in Boone County. As the years advanced, education moved from one-room schools into larger school buildings to accommodate more children as school districts were consolidated.

The consolidation of predominantly rural schools into broader regions of public education in Illinois started in the late 1800s and spread through the early decades of the 1900s. The Belvidere School District #100 and North Boone School District #200 are the result of consolidations that occurred early in the 20th Century.

School consolidation occurred to help public education be more efficient and provide a higher-quality education. When consolidation did occur, students would travel into towns, cities and villages to attend school in larger buildings. Each district set its own set of priorities, limited only by the skills of its managing board members and tax revenues of the district. In the world today, even in Belvidere, the future requires more education than we are presently providing in order to be an economically viable community. Even a community like Freeport, which is beyond the promising Interstate 90 Corridor, can prosper if it has the educational qualities of a well-managed suburban school district.

Often, the prosperous and well-educated move to quiet, safe communities and commute or work remotely to provide for their children. But often these quiet, safe communities have an unskilled, labor-intensive economy. Belvidere is fortunate to be located along the Interstate 90 Corridor, even if it has not yet understood its full potential.

Foster Leads Bipartisan Effort to Keep STEM Graduates in America

Press Release

Reps. Bill Foster (D-IL), Mike Lawler (R-NY), Wiley Nickel (D-NC), and Sylvia Garcia (D-TX) have introduced the bipartisan Keep STEM Talent Act to make certain advanced Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics (STEM) degree holders eligible for permanent resident status. This would allow these graduates to remain in the United States following their graduation and would remove barriers for them to work in the United States.

"We must expand America's STEM workforce to compete in the global economy," said Congressman Bill Foster. "Our country gives international STEM students world-class educations, only to turn them away when they want to stay in the United States after graduation and contribute their skills to our economy. Allowing these graduates to stay would help put our country on the cutting edge of scientific research and technological development and create good-paying American jobs along the way. I'm proud to lead this bipartisan effort to build up our STEM workforce."

"I'm proud to join my colleagues in introducing the bipartisan Keep STEM Talent Act of 2023. Our colleges and universities are some of the best in the world, and every year, hundreds of thousands of international students come to our shores for a world-class education, only to take that knowledge and talent with them when they leave. The Keep STEM Talent Act will enable more international students who have completed advanced STEM degrees from U.S. institutions to continue working in the U.S. when they graduate. This will enable them to contribute to our economy and help America retain its position as the world leader in science and technology," said Congressman Mike Lawler.

"I'm proud to partner with Congressman Foster and Congressman Lawler on this common sense, bipartisan legislation to help bolster scientific and technological research here in the United States," said Congressman Wiley Nickel. "North Carolina is home to many prestigious colleges and universities, attracting international talent from all over the world. To remain at the forefront of cutting edge scientific and technological research and innovation, we need to ensure that international students that come to North Carolina for their higher education are able to stay in the United States once their degree is completed."

Foster Statement on UAW Strike

Press Release

Congressman Bill Foster (D-IL) has issued the following statement after the United Auto Workers (UAW) initiated a strike following stalled negotiations with the Big Three auto manufacturers:

"Strong unions built the American middle class and have been vital to the economic security of hardworking families in my district, including in Belvidere, where the community grew over the past several decades around an iconic assembly plant that's now been idled by Stellantis. Our office, together with the Governor and local officials, have done everything within our power to give Stellantis attractive options to settle this strike in a way that provides a future for the Belvidere plant, and we will continue to extend those efforts if Stellantis chooses to go down that path with us.

"I have always supported protecting the right of workers to organize and collectively bargain. I'm proud to stand in solidarity with the United Auto Workers as they exercise their right to go on strike for the pay, benefits, and job security they deserve.

"I call on both parties to continue communicating in good faith to reach an equitable agreement that keeps assembly plants open while recognizing and respecting workers' rights."

danger he or she poses to the community. While some charged with violent crimes like domestic battery were able to buy their way out of jail under the old system, others were left sitting in jail for weeks or months because they can't afford bail, sometimes for low-level offenses.

This cost some their jobs, homes or even parental rights in the process.

"As a defender, one of the hardest things I have to do is have conversations with mothers, sisters... how are they gonna pull together the money to get their person out of jail?" Cook County Public Defender Sharone Mitchell, who was heavily involved in crafting the law in his previous job at the Illinois Justice Project, said at a recent media briefing about the end of cash bail.

"Judges never had crystal balls and never will have crystal balls," he said, adding that he believes the Pretrial Fairness Act – the bail reform portion of the wider-ranging SAFE-T Act – will help improve judges' decision-making when considering whether to detain an arrestee.

But while the end of cash bail is supposed to create a more equal justice system, the months of preparation leading up to the SAFE-T Act's full implementation have accentuated profound disparities between the court systems in each of Illinois' 102 counties.

And no matter how the local officials feel about the end of cash bail and the state's overhaul on pretrial procedures, they're responsible for implementing the law with whatever resources they have – a reality even some of the law's most ardent opponents have acknowledged.

Counties face disparate resource challenges

Some bigger counties are better prepared than others for the changes required by the PFA. Cook County, for example, is one of a few counties that has for years been moving toward limiting the use of cash bail. Additionally, the county's criminal courthouse on Chicago's near-south side has for years been holding bond court every day of the week – a practice shared by other larger county court systems in Illinois.

Beginning Monday, that courthouse will hold initial appearance hearings at midday, along with longer detention hearings every morning and afternoon. During a media briefing last week, Cook County Judge Mary Marubio, who presides over the county's pretrial division, outlined how these hearings will be organized across multiple courtrooms in

Reps. Foster, Morelle Lead Bipartisan Effort to Streamline Nuclear Technical Expertise, Bolster Nuclear Security

Press Release

Congressman Bill Foster (D-IL) and Congressman Joe Morelle (D-NY) introduced the Nuclear Forensics Authority Realignment Act. This bipartisan legislation would realign the National Technical Nuclear Forensics (NTNF) program from the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) to the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA). The bill is cosponsored by Congressman Scott DesJarlais (R-TN) and Congressman Doug Lamborn (R-CO).

In 2010, Congress formally codified the NTNF program under DHS to ensure a ready and robust nuclear forensics capability. The program established a nuclear forensics interagency partnership to prepare the government to respond to a nuclear event without warning. However, as the NTNF program's capabilities have matured, the misalignment of its functions has created inefficiencies that inhibit the program's advancement.

Realigning NTNF under NNSA will lead to greater efficiency, as NTNF will have direct access to NNSA's research and development efforts and nuclear materials. The realignment will also eliminate duplication of efforts between NNSA and DHS.

"I'm proud to lead my colleagues in this bipartisan effort to realign NTNF under NNSA," said Congressman Bill Foster. "The NTNF program is essential to tracing the origin of nuclear material that we or our allies find, making it more difficult for countries to obscure their production or use of nuclear weapons. NNSA has the technical expertise to run this program as effectively as possible, which will help us hold our enemies accountable and keep our country safe." "In the event of a national nuclear emergency it is imperative we are capable of an immediate response to prevent further attacks and save lives," said Congressman Joe Morelle. "I have long supported designating the National Nuclear Security Administration as our nation's nuclear forensics lead, and I'm grateful to my colleagues for joining me in this bipartisan effort. I look forward to quickly passing this common-sense legislation and streamlining the deployment of our nation's nuclear expertise."

start date.

State Sen. Robert Peters, D-Chicago, whose negotiations on the law made him a national figure – and a lightning rod for criticism – said at the time he knows the public debate over bail reform isn't over, even if the legal battle is.

“Let me be clear: Cash bail delegitimizes criminal justice systems and transforms them into systems that violate public safety instead of upholding it,” Peters said in a news release. “Illinois will not go back. We will only move forward with our goal of ensuring public safety for all Illinoisans, regardless of their background or financial position.”

‘Detainable’ not equal to ‘handcuff-able’

The reform was driven by the Illinois Legislative Black Caucus in January 2021 in the wake of George Floyd's murder in Minneapolis as an effort to address systemic racism in the criminal justice system. It was part of the broader SAFE-T Act criminal justice reform – short for Safety, Accountability, Fairness and Equity-Today.

An analysis of U.S. Department of Justice data by researchers at the Loyola University of Chicago Center for Criminal Justice showed that in 2019, half of jail detainees in Illinois were Black compared to 15 percent of the state population; 33 percent were white compared to 76 percent of the population; and 14 percent were Hispanic compared to 18 percent of the population.

Of those jailed, 89 percent were being held pretrial.

The PFA's multi-pronged approach to limiting pretrial detention starts with law enforcement decisions in the field.

Under the law, officers retain the discretion to arrest any individual they believe to be a threat to the public safety or if they believe an arrest is the only way to keep the individual from continued violation of the law, like when a person is trespassing.

One major change, however, is that it directs – but does not require – officers to cite and release the individual if they are accused of a crime below a Class A misdemeanor, with a court date to be scheduled within 21 days.

Further changes occur at the judicial level after an arrest is made.

The PFA directly states the crimes and circumstances under which a judge can order an individual jailed as they await trial.

After weathering months of criticism and election season misinformation campaigns over the SAFE-T Act, Democratic lawmakers in December added to the list of offenses considered “detainable,” including any felony that involved the “threat of or infliction of great bodily harm or permanent disability or disfigurement.”

Another subset of crimes become detainable if a judge believes the defendant to be a flight risk.

Loyola's CCJ analyzed arrest data from 2020 and 2021, concluding that a judge would not have been able to detain the defendant in 56 percent of arrests that occurred over that span had the PFA been in place.

But another analysis by the CCJ showed only 19 percent of individuals with pending felony cases were in jail while awaiting trial on average from 2017 through 2019, with another 17 percent on electronic monitoring or pretrial supervision.

That means about 64 percent of individuals awaiting trial for felony charges over that timespan were living in the community without any sort of supervision, the study found.

The research didn't predict whether more or fewer defendants will be jailed while awaiting trial once the PFA takes effect. It did, however, predict that those facing lower-level charges will likely spend less time in jail, while stays may be lengthened for those accused of violent crime because they can no longer free themselves on bail if a judge orders them detained.

Lake County State's Attorney Eric Rinehart, who supported the PFA, said the distinction between the law's changes to judicial and law enforcement authority led to much of the misinformation that surrounded it in a contentious 2022 election season.

“The word ‘detainable’ became intermixed with the word ‘handcuff-able’... and I think police officers thought that they were going to be checking their cheat sheet under the SAFE-T Act as to whether or not they could handcuff a retail theft (suspect),” he said. “Police officers were directed not to cuff cooperative individuals who were not a threat to anyone, who were accused of committing a very small class of crimes, what we call (class) B and C misdemeanors.”

Those misdemeanors include such crimes as low-level property offenses that do not include violence.

Rinehart spoke at a media briefing this week organized by domestic violence survivor advocacy groups. Those groups, which worked with lawmakers to draft the law, noted it gives judges greater authority than previous law to detain individuals accused of domestic violence.

Madeleine Behr, policy director at the Chicago Alliance Against Sexual Exploitation, said state's attorneys will – for the first time – be required to notify victims when a defendant has an initial detention hearing. The state will also be required to notify victims about the ability to obtain protective orders at the time of the initial and subsequent hearings.

Loyola researchers estimated 33 percent of those arrested in 2020 and 2021 would have been detainable based on their risk to the public, while 11 percent would have been detainable under the willful flight standard.

Domestic violence charges or violations of an order of protection made up about half the cases in which a person would have been detainable, per the research, as a detention hearing is required under the law when a defendant has violated an order of protection.

“And this really came from our community,” Behr said in the media briefing. “This came from our input – it's recognizing the lethality and the harm at play when these kinds of violations happen.”

‘Least restrictive’ method necessary

One directive of the Pretrial Fairness Act was to ensure an individual's appearance in court through the “least restrictive” means, meaning pretrial incarceration should be used only when necessary to ensure public safety.

For many counties, that could mean greater reliance on electronic monitoring, a type of GPS tracking that requires the defendant to wear an ankle bracelet and be tracked remotely by justice system professionals.

The PFA gives individuals on electronic monitoring two days each week to move freely to accomplish daily tasks – a departure from previous law. That provision has been ridiculed by conservatives and law enforcement groups who say that it grants too much freedom.

In 71 of Illinois' 102 counties, electronic monitoring will be overseen by the Supreme Court's Office of Statewide Pretrial Services, a newly formed state agency designed to assist counties with the PFA's implementation and to fulfill a 1987 law that required all circuit courts to offer pretrial services.

It received a $23 million state appropriation for the current fiscal year after a $26 million allotment last year, which included allocations for start-up costs.

For OSPS-affiliated counties, defendants ordered to wear ankle monitors will have their movements tracked from a centralized location in Springfield with round-the-clock staffing. Electronic monitoring officers ensure defendants aren't approaching geographically marked “exclusion zones” where the individual is prohibited from approaching. Those could include a perimeter around a person's home if they are on house arrest or around a victim's home if the defendant is the subject of an order of protection.

“If we have an exclusion zone case, or we have a situation where we think a defendant is attempting to remove their device, we can contact law enforcement and seek their assistance to help us remedy or respond to a violation,” retired judge Cara Smith, director of the OSPS, said in an interview.

Electronic monitoring can only be ordered by a judge, and the mission of the OSPS is to carry out those monitoring requirements once they are ordered. It's one of several services the office offers to its member courts.

The Illinois Network for Pretrial Justice advocacy organization, however, is wary of expanding the use of electronic monitoring in the wake of cash bond's end.

“Requiring anyone to wear an ankle shackle and be monitored in lieu of having to pay bond is an injustice that is in direct conflict with the spirit of the law and its intended impact,” the organization said in a statement.

The OSPS also pays for electronic monitoring services in its counties, costs that were previously borne by the defendant in many counties.

A new process takes shape

Under previous law, bail hearings typically occurred within 72 hours of arrest, lasting fewer than five minutes. Prosecutors would detail the defendant's charges and potentially recommend a bail amount. The judge would then decide the conditions of their release, including how much money, if any, the defendant must post before their release.

The overhaul of the system was driven by the concern that decisions about a person's freedom weren't receiving enough scrutiny in court.

Beginning Monday, it will still be up to state's attorneys to petition the court to detain an individual prior to their trial. But upon that petition, a new, more robust pretrial process will begin. Under it, the defendant is given the right to legal representation at their first hearing, with the detention hearing typically taking place within 24 or 48 hours of the first appearance in court.

The new process allows a defendant to have a public defender or private attorney at their first appearance, while also placing a greater emphasis on counties to provide pretrial services aimed at assuring a defendant's appearance in court while also connecting them with supports focused on limiting recidivism.

For Nathan Rowland, a part-time contract public defender for Gallatin and Hamilton counties in the far southeastern corner of Illinois, that means he'll be busier than ever before in his two-decade career as a public defender. Rowland, who works out of his private office in McLeansboro, said he still has many unanswered questions as to how the system will work.

But he also said he believes the justice system has for years been “lazily” substituting high-dollar bonds for “a particularized dangerousness finding,” which will be a requirement for keeping a defendant in jail under the PFA. And for many of his low-income clients – especially those accused of non-violent crimes – abolishing cash bail will mean they won't languish in jail simply because they can't afford to post bond.

"You get removed from your life and when you come back to it two weeks later or three months later, it's in complete shambles," Rowland said of individuals who are detained pretrial.

On Aug. 30, the Supreme Court issued an order allowing counties to hold detention hearings remotely through March 18, 2024, due to the anticipated volume of new cases and limited resources in certain areas of the state.

A new state agency takes shape

Of Illinois' 102 counties, 31 have administered their own pretrial services for a varying number of years. The other 71 will be served by the OSPS.

Smith said the agency she leads has grown from about 10 employees in June 2022 to more than 170, and it is up and running in 70 counties, with Will County to be added to the list in October. It's secured office space in 47 counties in addition to its central operations center in Springfield.

Its employees work to connect individuals with such support services as drug or behavioral health treatment, anger management or any other conditions imposed by the court. It also sends text message reminders of hearings among other outreach and scheduling efforts.

But perhaps its most important task alongside electronic monitoring, Smith said, was offering a "neutral" report about a defendant's history to judges, public defenders and state's attorneys prior to a first appearance in court.

Those reports take about an hour to prepare and usually include an interview with the defendant, a process that starts with identifying new defendants daily and carving out time to conduct interviews. The agency has completed more than 18,000 such investigations since August 2022, Smith said.

Smith said when she was a judge in juvenile court in Cook County, "you didn't have sort of that neutral presentation."

The presentation, she said, includes: "'Here's what we know about this individual,' including a detailed criminal history, if it exists, and information about, 'are they employed, are they in school? What's the home situation like?'"

Rowland said those services have been invaluable, noting he'd often enter a hearing room without knowing anything about the defendant he was about to represent.

The "million-dollar question," Smith said, is how the office can best support individuals to limit them from reoffending.

"We have a support services staff who look to identify resources that might help a person succeed," she said. "But you know, we will have – and there always have been – pretrial failures where someone... continues to engage in criminal activity."

The new system, Smith said, will provide a more targeted approach for detention.

"I think the idea under the PFA is that we'll be better able to identify people whose dangerousness is such that they should be detained pretrial, and everyone else is out," she said.

ISP has also published a "frequently asked questions" page on its website with additional information about how to submit an endorsement affidavit. Help is also available at any of ISP's FOID kiosks, located in Lockport, Springfield, Collinsville, and Du Quoin.

According to the statute, those affidavits must include the applicant's name, date of birth and FOID card number. Applicants also need to provide the make, model, caliber, and serial number of each weapon, and a statement testifying that they own a locking mechanism for the weapon.

The affidavit form will also include a statement that reads, "Warning: Entering false information on this form is punishable as perjury under Section 32-2 of the Illinois Criminal Code of 2022."

The law passed during the General Assembly's lame duck session in January. It was prompted by a mass shooting at an Independence Day parade last year in Highland Park that left seven people dead and dozens more injured or traumatized.

The assault weapons ban prompted several lawsuits almost immediately after Gov. JB Pritzker signed it into law on Jan. 10.

Numerous challenges in federal court allege the law violates the Second Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. One federal judge in the Southern District of Illinois ruled that it did, but two other judges in the Northern District rejected such claims. Those cases have now been consolidated and an appeal is pending before the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago.

In 4-3 decision in August, the Illinois Supreme Court upheld the law, rejecting claims that the exemptions in the act amounted to "special legislation" and a denial of equal protection under the Illinois Constitution.

But the court has delayed issuing a final order in that case pending the plaintiffs' appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

the criminal courthouse in Chicago.

"It's not so different from how we release people now, it's just that money will no longer be a condition of release," Marubio said.

Mitchell has also been beefing up his staff at the public defender's office since he was appointed in early 2021. A spokesperson for the office said increasing staffing was a priority for Mitchell regardless of the PFA's requirements, and the office has hired "well over 100" new attorneys since 2021. Mitchell also created a Pretrial Division in anticipation of bail reform's original Jan. 1 implementation date, and 21 attorneys have been assigned to that unit.

It's an entirely different story in southeastern Illinois, where Nathan Rowland is the part-time public defender serving Gallatin County, which borders Indiana, and neighboring Hamilton County. Those counties have a combined population of nearly 13,000, per 2020 U.S. Census data.

Rowland, who serves as president of the Illinois Council of Chief Defenders, is one of a handful of part-time public defenders in Illinois who contract with more than one county. But his status as a part-time public defender is much less rare; more than half of Illinois' 102 counties don't have full-time public defenders.

Per state law — which hasn't been updated since 1949 — only counties with 35,000 or more residents are required to set up offices of public defender, and even then, they're not required to be full-time. Counties with populations of less than 35,000 aren't required to establish a public defender program, though in modern history even the smallest of counties have at least contracted part-time public defenders, while others have voluntarily hired full-time PDs.

Rowland does his public defender work out of his law office in McLeansboro in Hamilton County, appearing in court across the two counties as needed when he's assigned clients who can't afford an attorney — usually after defendants' initial bond hearings. But after Monday, his presence will be required at every initial condition and pretrial detention hearing for newly arrested defendants. Rowland noted that this is a much greater challenge for judicial systems in rural areas of the state than it is in counties like Cook.

While supportive of bail reform, Rowland also predicts the first several months under the new pretrial system will be difficult, especially in places with judicial systems vastly different than places like Cook and the collar counties.

"They're used to running court all day every day anyway," he said of Cook County's existing bond court schedule. "In other parts of the state, we're doing something that we have never done before and have not been set up to do."

Late last month, the Illinois Supreme Court issued an order allowing pretrial hearings to take place remotely for six months. Rowland said without the ability to use videoconference technology for the pretrial hearings, counties like his would be unable to comply with the PFA's requirement that arrestees appear in front of a judge within 48 hours.

It's not just Rowland's limitations as a single part-time public defender serving two counties; he noted that getting all parties together in one courtroom has always been difficult. Neither Gallatin nor Hamilton counties run their own jails, so arrangements must be made with the sheriff's office from the White and Saline county jails to transport detainees.

Court reporters are also in short supply, and state's attorneys offices in some counties are also one-person operations, Rowland said. Judges also travel from courthouse to courthouse in the 12 mostly rural counties of the state's Second Judicial Circuit.

"In both of the counties that I practice in, after Thursday at noon, generally there's no judge in the county until Monday at 9 (a.m.)," Rowland said. "We don't have judges assigned to either of these counties on Fridays at all...Some counties only have a judge scheduled twice a week or three times a week."

Even before the COVID-19 pandemic necessitated the adoption of virtual hearings, Rowland said local court systems had started experimenting with remote court, and he predicted those lessons would help after Monday. But if he or another person whose presence is required for pretrial hearings gets sick or goes on vacation, Rowland said the cases would likely just have to be rescheduled.

Nearly 100 miles northwest of Rowland's law office, St. Clair County Public Defender Cathy MacElroy is gearing up for what she expects to be a rocky road for the next two years. In December, just weeks before cash bail was originally set to

The state has appropriated $10 million for public defenders to help implement the Pretrial Fairness Act, with the state's 101 counties outside of Cook each receiving between $77,000 and $147,555.

While MacElroy is grateful for that funding – and generally supportive of the concept of ending cash bail – she said St. Clair County's portion of that appropriation isn't as much as she'd hoped, especially if it's funding that won't be reallocated in future years.

Beginning next week, those already jailed can petition for hearings to be released under the PFA's guidelines. They would be entitled to a detention hearing on a timeline set in law based on the seriousness of their alleged crime.

For Rowland's area of the state, this is not a big number.

"In one county we've got two people in custody and we know we're gonna have hearings on them on Monday," Rowland said. "In another county, I've got three people in custody and I'm gonna be having hearings on them on Wednesday."

In Cook County, current detainees numbered nearly 5,400 on Friday, according to the sheriff's daily report. Mitchell said last week that petitions for pretrial release within the current jail population would be assessed on a "case-by-case basis."

MacElroy predicts the group of 150 or so current St. Clair County Jail detainees she already filed petitions for could have their days in court and released within the next week. She added that the county's state's attorney's office has also filed detention petitions for approximately 250 people currently in jail. As those cases all fall under the detainable crimes according to the law, MacElroy predicted they'll be heard over the next few months.

Help from the state

Illinois is one of seven states without any oversight mechanism for monitoring how effectively counties' court systems help defendants exercise their right to counsel for trial via the public defender's office, according to a 2021 study commissioned by the Illinois Supreme Court. The resulting report from the Boston-based Sixth Amendment Center warned that Illinois' framework limits the independence of public defenders and makes for inadequate representation in counties where PDs are overworked.

More than half of states directly fund public defenders instead of leaving funding up to counties like Illinois does.

While the state isn't any closer to creating a statewide public defender system, the Illinois Office of Statewide Pretrial Services represents a major step forward in providing resources to judicial systems across the state. As of October 1, OSPS will partner with 71 counties. For months, it's been offering services like compiling information about new arrestees. OSPS is also charged with helping connect those who are released from jail with services like drug treatment or anger management, whether voluntary or ordered by the court.

The agency has hired pretrial service officers embedded in 47 of the 71 OSPS-affiliated counties so far. Those officers are responsible for quickly preparing reports on new arrestees' criminal histories and professional backgrounds based on interviews with the defendant and associated fact-checking. The reports are then sent to public defenders, state's attorneys and judges.

A few dozen counties in Illinois already had their own versions of pretrial service offices. But OSPS has lightened the load for some of them, like the court's probation department in St. Clair County, which opted into OSPS.

But in counties that have never had any formalized pretrial service office, Rowland said OSPS' work has proven extremely helpful to the entire judicial system, but particularly to his work as a public defender. Prior to last year, he said he'd walk into hearings totally blind, having never met his client and not knowing "anything about him."

"Right before the hearing... I'd be standing over in the corner (saying), 'This is what you've been charged with. Where you living? You got a job?'" Rowland said. "I (didn't) know any of that."

Pretrial service officers begin their days early in the morning, and Rowland said he's been receiving reports on new arrestees oftentimes before 8 a.m.

In August, OSPS began oversight of electronic monitoring in participating counties, and began picking up the tab for those ordered to wear the GPS tracking devices – fees that would sometimes drive the poorest defendants into debt.

MacElroy said she was glad her clients would no longer be saddled with the cost, but also noted that in St. Clair County, electronic monitoring isn't used "a ton."

She predicted that under the PFA, judges might even order ankle monitors less often, as prosecutors would have to present specific findings for why the GPS tracking would be necessary. The PFA requires judges to find the "least restrictive" pretrial conditions necessary for a defendant, and the law provides that individuals on electronic monitoring can have two days per week to move freely so they can accomplish daily tasks.

But despite the assistance OSPS is giving, not all areas of the state will adopt electronic monitoring. In rural southeastern Illinois, for example, defendants typically had not been able to afford the daily fees associated with ankle monitor use, so electronic monitoring has historically been rare. But, as Rowland pointed out, many rural areas face a much more basic logistical hurdle: large swaths of land with neither cell phone coverage nor reliable broadband — or even landline — service.

"Well, you've lost signal," Rowland imagined an OSPS employee saying as they cite a defendant for non-compliance. "Well, what does that mean? They've tampered with the device or they've just lost signal because of where they're at?"

Rowland said defense attorneys would be "on guard against" increased use of electronic monitoring in his area of the state, saying he worries it could set his clients up for failure in the judicial system.

end in Illinois, MacElroy alerted the county's chief judge that her office's workload was so dire, the public defender could no longer accept any new cases.

At the time, the five full-time attorneys in the office were each handling more than 350 cases in 2022 — well above the American Bar Association's recommended guideline of 150. Since then, MacElroy said things got better, but the reprieve didn't last. County officials made the public defender job full-time in January, and MacElroy was able to increase the base pay for attorneys in her office and recruit two more defenders.

Attorneys in the public defender's office have since lowered their caseloads down to around 200 cases per year, but MacElroy expects that number to begin climbing again after Monday.

"We have a lot of violent crime in the county," she said. "Each of my full-time lawyers has at least 10 murder (cases)... And this week in my county from Friday until now there have been five murders charged. I don't know what happened in the last week, but that's kind of like what we're dealing with. We get rid of one (case) and five more appear."

Additionally, in recent months, the public defender's office has lost two full-time lawyers, including one who moved over to the state's attorney's office and is making roughly $10,000 more, MacElroy said.

She's already hired a recent law school graduate who expects to be fully licensed in November and is hopeful to hire an eighth attorney. But the competition for public interest attorneys is fierce, MacElroy said, as "every state's attorney and public defender's office in the state basically is hiring right now" due to the demands of Illinois' pretrial overhaul.

The following is a complete list of real estate that has been made or changed by the Township Assessor or Supervisor of Assessments for the 2023 assessment year for Boone County. This publication is made in accordance with Section 12-10 of the Property Tax Code and serves as public notice to the taxpayers of Boone County of the assessed values fixed upon their property by the Township Assessor or Supervisor of Assessments. The assessment of property other than farmland and coal are required by law to be assessed at 33 1/3% of fair market value. If the resulting value is less than the fair cash value of your property, you may be under assessed. All equalized assessed values are subject to further equalization and revision by the Boone County Board of Review as well as equalization by the Illinois Department of Revenue.
